Hospital Trustees Celebrate Quality Initiatives

American Hospital Association president Rich Umbdenstock headlines educational program for hospital trustees from Long Island and the Hudson Valley . . . says their leadership needed now more than ever in era of reform

Trustees from Long Island hospitals and those in the Hudson Valley gathered Monday evening, December 6, 2010, at the LaGuardia Marriott to hear from American Hospital Association president/CEO Rich Umbdenstock about the crucial role trustees continue to play in the unfolding health reform process. The group of key hospital leaders also paid tribute to hospital quality initiatives recognized by the Nassau-Suffolk Hospital Council (NSHC) and the Northern Metropolitan Hospital Association (NorMet) as the most outstanding for 2010. NSHC and NorMet, representing hospitals from similar regions, share the same advocacy agenda through their Suburban Hospital Alliance.

Umbdenstock remarked that quality continues to improve at all hospitals, but the industry as a whole needs to do even better. Reform is predicated on pay linked to performance and a better patient experience, he added. Integration of services across the continuum will enhance patient care and safety, Umbdenstock explained, and the delivery of care is increasingly moving in this direction, propelled by natural market forces and the pressures of reform. Patients, providers, and payers want better value and lower costs.

“Reform is a beginning,” said Umbdenstock. “It’s a series of steps in new directions.”

Catholic Health Services of Long Island (CHSLI) took the Hospital Council’s top quality prize, the “Excellence in Patient Safety” Award for its project, “Improving Obstetric Patient Safety Outcomes through Crew Resource Methodology.” This year, 33 projects from Long Island hospitals were entered into the competition.

In accepting the award on behalf of the system’s five hospitals and its 18,000 plus employees, Joseph Conte, executive vice president, corporate services, CHSLI said, “The Crew Resource Methodology has transformed the culture and outcomes at CHSLI. Adverse events were reduced between 26 and 42 percent and the culture of safety improved dramatically.” The methodology, developed by NASA, focuses on improving safety by examining the role of human error.

Regional Program for Hospital Trustees and Executives

The meeting provided chairmen of the Nassau-Suffolk Hospital Council and the Northern Metropolitan Hospital Association with an opportunity to informally talk about joint priorities for the Suburban Hospital Alliance – the venture through which both associations share advocacy activities and goals due to the similarities of the two regions. Trustees and hospital CEOs work collegially through the year to ensure good governance and effective advocacy for their hospitals. Programs like the one offered in December enable trustees, executives, and regional hospital leaders to learn and share information and best practice ideas.

Hospitals One Source of Economic Fuel for LI

Benefit to local communities is no small change

Long Island's hospitals provide 47,460 jobs and $14.6 billion to the local economy in direct and indirect spending and $629 million in state and local taxes, according to the report New York State's Hospitals: Transforming Lives and Communities published by the Healthcare Association of New York State.

"It is clear from these numbers that hospitals are anchors in their local communities," said Kevin Dahill, president/CEO of the Nassau-Suffolk Hospital Council. "They represent an important component of the economy, as it struggles to pull out of the recession. This is especially true for the thousands of Long Islanders employed by our hospitals, as well as the hundreds of local businesses these employees and their hospital employers support."

HANYS Leads Diabetes Initiative to Improve Public Health

The Healthcare Association of New York State teamed up with the New York State Health Foundation to champion the fight against diabetes in New York by helping providers implement and enhance coordinated systems to manage and prevent the disease.

HANYS' Diabetes Campaign Collaborative sponsored by the New York State Health Foundation's (NYSHealth) Diabetes Campaign is a statewide campaign that provides education, technical assistance, and covers some expenses for participating systems' or hospitals' outpatient clinics, primary care sites, and diabetes self-management education programs.
